When I lived in another state without mail in voting it was much more difficult to vote. Having to find the polling place, wait in line and once in the booth knowing all of the candidates and issues listed became tricky.

In Oregon it is such a pleasure to vote because you can sit at your kitchen table, study the ballot and if you have any questions look them up in the voters manual to further study the issue.

You can teach your children about voting and doing your civic duty. Then simply return the ballot to the local library's ballot box while running errands.

I believe the simplicity of voting in Oregon is why we have such a high voter turnout and anyone who is trying to make it more difficult is doing so to suppress votes.
