One of the perks of living in Oregon was that it made it so much easier to be aware of local governance and activity, and participate in voting at all levels. Voting this way helps so much when work, transportation, disability and such get in the way of in-person voting as frequently as one should try to as a citizen. Making the responsibility and duty to participate simpler and more accessible to citizens in a priority - a little delay in counting is worth it to me if it makes it possible for more people to be active voters and have their say.
