This is an attack on Oregonians' right to vote-- mail-in voting has worked well for years in both Washington and Oregon.

Making it harder and less convenient to vote is a tool to suppress the free will of the American people, and one of the few winning strategies for Republicans. Fewer people voting means fewer people voting Democrat. I find it interesting that this is suddenly a priority for Oregon's legislature under the current administration.

I suggest that if Republicans want to actually win elections, they campaign on issues that people want to see enacted, instead of trying to cheat their way into office by working measures like this to suppress the vote and the voice of their constituents.

Shame on any legislative body member who pushes this.
