SB210

Mail-in voting has been shown over and over to yield highly authentic ballots and virtually no fraud (none that would have made a difference in an election). It provides us more time, consideration, privacy, and comfort to consider our options thoughtfully and under less stress. It encourages a higher turnout and more representational voting.

Going backward in time to a same day in person voting requirement is nothing more than an attempt to reduce the number of total voters and favor voters of specific political persuasions, geographies, and socio economic status.
