Mail-in voting allows me to be the most informed voter I can be. I can research candidates as I fill out my ballot. When I used to vote in-person in other states I've lived in, I was dependent on what little information was available on the ballot for the candidates and measures I wasn't aware of. I felt guilt for my ignorance, because I wasn't able to be as good a US citizen as I wanted to be. I think the American people should be wary of any group that thinks they will benefit from having more ignorant voters in an election.
