Mail-in voting has been critical for me to get my voice heard in our elections. I work and am unable to stand in a line for a long period of time away from my job. Mail-in voting makes the process much easier for me to fit into my schedule since I can fill out parts where I have time and drop off the ballot when I'm done without having to wait in long lines. The convenience of doing so makes it easy to have my voice be heard.

To remove mail-in voting as the default and make the standard in-person would be a hurdle to my ability to participate in our government. Show me how much fraud is actually happening before we make my ability to vote harder than it currently is. This would hinder so many voices and let those that have the time to stand around get all the power while those that have to work, are unable to get to a polling place, hold very busy schedules, or travel frequently get no voice.

I do not see how forcing in-person voting on the day of the election would cause anything but lower turnouts in elections and a lower representation of different thoughts and voices in our community.
