I am strongly for making in person voting mandatory. People's excuses for mail in voting are silly and an attempt to keep using a flawed system that leaves voters unsure of the accuracy of elections. Other states have continued in person voting and verifying that only registered, legal voters are able to partake and that they only vote once. Unlike mail in voting which is hugely flawed, I personally have received multiple ballots in the past. I am sure it is a very common occurance and who knows how many take this mistake as an opportunity. Something that would be eliminated with in person voting. This would also eliminate the fraud and corruption - such as ballot harvesting and as we saw all over Clark County Washington no ballot boxes being lit on fire in an attempt to sabotage hundreds if not thousands of votes.

The reasoning behind mail in voting is out of pure laziness and excuses from people who try to make everything into an issue when reality is we need to enforce/ensure fair elections and this is the only way. America needs to quit making excuses, rise up and require voter ID at in person voting booths once and for all. And results should be almost immediate, the suspect long drawn out results in Oregon need to be done away with.
