This is an easy call. Mail in ballots are not secure. If you want to protect democracy it begins with protecting the ballots. Instead, Oregon has pioneered the collapse of election integrity and the impact has disenfranchised a significant portion of its citizens in the process.

How can a state allow ballot harvesting, allow sealed ballot envelopes to be opened and taped closed, and allow ballots to be physically changed and still be accepted(or denied based on that ballot showing multiple selections for a single position)

If you CARE AT ALL about democracy, you support the reclamation of ballot integrity in Oregon, you care ONLY ABOUT WINNING, your a Democrat trying to perpetuate a system designed to keep you in power.

It takes integrity to call for integrity, it takes a desire for control and power to be an obstacle to integrity.

I see comments about a lack of proof that mail in ballots are insecure. This takes an intentional act of ignorance, a complete abandonment of honest intellectual analysis of our current system. Lack of transparency is a significant "feature" of this current election regime. Fair minded people realize that politicians, who thrive based on their power, will do anything they can to maintain and maximize that power, and that relies on the ballot box, ofcourse they are going to manipulate the system.

Returning the ballot process to the citizens through in person balloting, controlled chain of custody by certified officials, and an open review and tabulation of those ballots is the only certain way to protect democracy in this wonderful and beautiful state.
