I believe that you should be making it easier to get petition signatures and have them approved, not harder. We should be able to go online to sign petitions rather than the arcane and outdated regulations currently in place. Instead you want to put more restrictions on the process so citizens are just not able in practical terms to get initiatives on the ballot. We are seeing in this current legislative session how ambitious the state government is in their overreach. Oregon's citizens need the right to put initiatives on the ballot more than ever.
