Mail-In voting has been one of the only ways I've been able to vote as an Oregon citizen. With my extremely busy schedule, the chances I could actually vote in-person, on one specific day, is highly unlikely. Getting rid of mail-in voting, is an effort to get rid of the voices of thousands of citizens just like me. This isn't even accounting for the thousands more who are disabled or cannot drive to a voting place. I hope we continue to enjoy the right to vote in a way that allows us to sit down and research each candidate and measure thoroughly from multiple sources, because this is also another benefit of mail-in voting.
