

Hello,

I hope this letter finds you well. I am writing to express my strong support for the continued use and expansion of mail-in voting, and to voice my concerns regarding the push to limit or eliminate this option in favor of in-person voting. As someone who believes in the right of every eligible citizen to participate in the democratic process, I believe that mail-in voting is a crucial tool for ensuring accessibility, safety, and inclusion.

Mail-in voting provides several advantages that benefit both voters and election officials. First and foremost, it eliminates barriers to participation for people who may face difficulties in voting in person, such as those with disabilities, elderly citizens, individuals living in remote areas, and working people who cannot afford to take time off to vote. By offering the option to vote by mail, we can ensure that every citizen has an equal opportunity to have their voice heard.

In light of recent public health concerns, particularly in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, mail-in voting has proven to be a safe and efficient method for casting ballots without putting voters or election workers at risk. In addition, it provides ample time for individuals to carefully consider their choices, reducing the likelihood of rushed decisions made under pressure in a polling booth.

Moreover, the logistics and efficiency of mail-in voting allow for a more secure and accurate counting process. Early voting through mail provides election officials with the ability to address any issues that may arise well before Election Day, helping to ensure the integrity of the election results.

While I understand the concerns about the potential for voter fraud, studies have shown that mail-in voting is no more prone to fraud than in-person voting. Measures such as signature verification, tracking systems, and safeguards implemented by local and state governments help ensure the integrity of mail-in ballots.

In conclusion, I respectfully urge you to consider the benefits of mail-in voting and to support policies that protect and expand this method of voting. In-person voting should remain an option for those who prefer it, but it should not be the sole method of participation in our elections. The future of our democracy depends on ensuring that every eligible voter has equal access to the voting process, and mail-in voting is a key part of that.

Thank you for your attention to this important matter. I look forward to your response.

Sincerely,

Allison Haulton
