When I lived in another region of the USA and was determining where to move, a major reason for choosing Oregon was the superior voting rights that enshrined democracy that made valid voting as available as possible. This initiative to make in-person voting the standard is a step in the WRONG direction. If it is enacted it will be one less reason of what makes this new home of mine a healthier state than where I came from. This is an initiative to deliberately reduce our countrymen's political agency and frankly I find it to be unamerican.
