Mail in voting is one of the biggest boons to democracy in ages. Forcing everyone to vote during a weekday to wait in line and vote only deters voters. Being able to think about your decisions at home where you can do research and make sound decisions on your own time is better for the democratic process. Switching to only in person voting will lower the participation rate significantly and will make it so people don't make informed decisions when they vote since they are less likely to prepare ahead of time for many of the ballot measures and local election options.
