

Submitter:

Eugene Creswick

On Behalf Of:

Committee:

Senate Committee On Rules

Measure, Appointment or Topic:

SB210

In-person voting is a regressive means of conducting an election. It would limit the ability for many constituents to be a part of our democracy, while having limited impact on higher-earners and the upper class, who have greater flexibility with work and family schedules.

I believe this will exacerbate the current class and culture divide, cutting lower class constituents out of the decision making process, and undermining our democratic process.