Oregon's by-mail voting law is a model for the nation and enables voters to make more informed choices by sitting down with the voter guide and the ballot. It's also a wonderful service for disabled people and those who don't have the flexibility to go to a polling place on a specific day.

Significant fraud from mail-in ballots has never been found, nationally, despite the overactive imaginations of certain politicians. There's no reason to discard a system that works so well.
