SB210

I am a disabled veteran living in Portland. The notion I would have to wait in line, possibly for hours, then be required to prove my citizenship (after just shy of 30 years military service) before I can vote is beyond ridiculous. It is insulting, inane, and unnecessary.

I understand there was a very bad glitch with ineligible voters being sent ballots last election, but fix that rather than going back to a system designed to limit the most fundamental right we have as citizens.

Any politician who thinks exclusively in-person voting is a good idea clearly does not have any interest in democracy.

Vote no.
