Voting by mail has been a convenient and secure method for all Oregonians to participate in the democratic process.

As someone who recently acquired US citizenship, I am looking forward to exercising my duty to vote. I consider myself lucky to be living in a state where people can vote by mail.

To try to enforce in person voting seems to have no tangible benefits. It seems to be meant to disenfranchise the sections of society that are unable to take time off work to vote.

Needless to say, voter disenfranchisement is undesirable if we want to live in a fair democracy.
