The only people worried about a mail in ballot are the ones currently leading this country into a proverbial garbage disposal.

The Republican party is the only one wanting this, but it is also not the majority party in this state. So they cannack off, and slink themselves into the gutter where they belong.

The only method Republicans use to lead is by taking rights away from the people. Their entire goal is to force slavery unto the citizens of this country, and restricting the ability to vote is exactly how they manage to get into or stay in any position of authority, whatsoever. If votes were equal state to state, voting abilities weren't restricted, and districts weren't gerrymandered to the state they already are, the Republican brand would die the death it wants to inflict on the public.

Any bill presented that ends the method of allowing a vote should never, ever, come to the floor. This one should have never seen any sort of consideration, at all.
