I SUPPORT bill. Our homeschooled children actually are learning more than those in the public system in overall averages. Our tax dollars are used whether we utilize the public school system or not. There is absolutely no reason to charge the homeschoolers for testing that this state requires. If our tax dollars can be used to pay for children learning less, it should be equivalently used for those who learn more. The parents of homeschooled children already have to purchase the curriculum they are using in which I personally feel the $$ used by the public school system should follow the child whether it's public, private, or home.
