As a US Navy veteran, I have lived and voted in multiple states, both paper and electronic. I would get a printout receipt of my cast votes as well, insuring no mistakes made. In Oregon, the "vote tracking" only acknowledges my vote was counted, not for whom I voted for. This system leaves me with no faith in a process of fair and accurate elections. No Identification requirements are absurd, as I need my driver's license for Every official transactions except to vote. In conclusion, local libraries or schools are the perfect poll outlets, and would give a sense of community for volunteers and voters alike, something sorely lacking in this state due to the drop off method of voting.
