I whole heartedly support SB 210 voting in person on Election Day. This year oart of our mailboxes were torn up by vandals. So receiving our mail was cumbersome. At first we had a few pieces of mail show up at our box. But then as days went on and they were trying to replace the boxes the mail was forwarded to the post office. I remember wondering about our ballots. Will they show up in our mail box or the post office? When I was younger I remember how simple and secure it was going and voting in person during Election Day. It gave me sense of security. When I vote by mail now I get a lot of anxiety wondering if my ballot was received and if it was counted. I use to drop off my ballot at the ballot box. This year I mailed it in because I saw the ballot boxes were being compromised. That only increased my anxiety because even though I mailed it days before the election I didn't see it was accepted until the last minute. I would prefer the simple old way of walking in person to the election office and casting my vote. It will prevent my anxiety from flaring up and I'll know without a doubt that my vote was counted.
