Mail in voting allows for an informed vote. It gives the voter time to research and discuss all ballot measures and down-ballot candidates that in-person voting simply does not afford as you feel rushed to get through the line.

Having previously lived in a state that didn't offer mail in votes, I'd hate to go back to standing in line, on a day I don't have off from work, and rushing through the process without really understanding the local measures and candidates before voting on them.
