I feel that in person voting is important. The integrity of our voting system shouldn't be jeopardized for convenience. I know people that register their kids as soon as they are of age even though they had no interest in voting at the time, just so they could vote with their ballots as well. I also know people that have moved and registered out of state and still receive ballots. How people have faith in vote by mail is beyond me. There are several less important task that we do in our lives that require us to be there in person with a valid id, implementing this system for voting seems like a no brainer to me.
