My experience with lane filtering is many (not all) motorcyclists get a sense of entitlement and abuse lane filtering rules. Some sure get angry if you don't make way and give up part of your lane in order for them to squeeze by. They squeeze into tight spaces where they really don't fit and cut you off, often requiring you the slam on the brakes and risk getting rear ended. They also scare the heck out of you, when you are nearly stopped and they come flying by at 50mph (especially the ones with loud exhaust). I don't support giving motorcyclists special privileges at the expense of other drivers.
