Hello from Louisiana,

Word comes you fools are about to consider the power to allow persons to be committed on nonprofessional suspicions.

For your local democrats under Trump don't forget to mention the 'woke mind virus' which the whole left is supposed to have in states such as Oregon:

We aren't laughing out here.

Southern states failing to distinguish between being an offender versus being queer, poor, a religious minority, or having the wrong tattoo or the wrong color hair is very real, a diagnosis doesn't have to be real to have the force of law and social censorship. If the Democrats pass this the right WILL SURELY use it against them regardless of competence and in spite of prominence. Also they will let harm any member of the party does as a scandal be accommodated to illustrate the 'work mind' sickness realized in whatever community they oppose just to erode trust from within and without about that community. A lot of this goes around already... Democrats are going to invite themselves right in to the trap of thinking it affects everyone but them just in hope they can use it against republicans... and so it goes. Why everything in America is broken.

There is a point to due process, if you no longer believe this here in America... you can but join the prisoners Musk shipped to El Salvador where those who were refugees to avoid the gangs were admittedly lumped with them by the Trump administration to join what the Trump Administration believed to be the actual gang.

And forget not that Trump answered the lack of criminal record with claims that he had deported those from lunatic asylums. Reap what you sow lawmakers. Don't bank on blaming anyone else that can't save you from the trap of the rules you binded yourselves and/or your institution-disappeared loved ones... with earlier.

Sincerely,
April Scheller
