Frank Cutsforth was an asset to not only his community of Canby, Oregon, but to the entire Great State of Oregon.

A community leader known for support of numerous charitable organizations, Frank embodied the quiet and caring nature that made him the heart and soul of the community. His generous philanthropy is still felt today throughout the city as well as further spreading out to the surrounding communities, school and fire districts, hospitals and health care facilities, youth activity and development organizations, assistance to the less fortunate and the list goes on. All of this while at the same time, running business that is held throughout the region as an example of customer service. He developed and mentored numerous people throughout his career and boosted so many to become contributing members of society. And as if that were not enough, he exemplified what it means to be a husband, father, grandfather, friend to so many.

Frank Cutsforth was truly one of a kind, a true Oregonian and should be recognized and remembered as such.
