I oppose this bill. independent reviews of waiting periods find that it is inconclusive that they do any good. If a person is experiencing an threat from an abusive spouse, or other imminent threat, a waiting period could very well get them killed.

I also strongly object to the several substantial changes to this bill since it was originally introduced. It seems like the sponsors are playing some type of legislative whack a mole game to prevent opposition and sneak something into law. If legislation cannot survive a transparent debate and action, it should not be considered.
