Measure, Appointment or Topic: SB1187

Climate adaptation is vital to our future. This bill will hold polluters accountable for the climate impacts they contribute to our environment while also preparing citizens for the inevitable changes to our climate. While the federal government continues to jeopardize public safety by repealing climate measures, Oregon has an opportunity to advance climate protections and be part of a bigger change. We can no longer rely on the federal government to protect citizens from the looming threat of climate change; state government is our only hope. As a lifelong Oregonian, I have full faith that Oregon can lead the change on climate issues such as this and protect its citizens from impending impacts.
