

Co-Chairs Gorsek and McLain, Vice Co-Chairs Starr and Boshart Davis, and members of the committee:

My name is Yeribel Bolaños Romero, and I am a community member in Hood River County Oregon. I'm writing to respectfully request your support for HB 2990, which intends to improve language access for Oregon's driver's license written tests.

This bill directs the Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT) to revise the written test for Class C driver license applicants to make it more accessible and easier to understand—particularly for individuals who do not speak English as their primary language. Under this legislation, ODOT must submit a progress report to the Joint Committee on Transportation by September 15, 2026. The report will outline efforts to translate the test into multiple languages, improve readability, establish a timeline for the release of the revised test, and detail the translation process, including attention to dialects and the qualifications of translators involved.

A driver's license is more than just a piece of identification—it's a key to opportunity. It provides access to jobs, health care, education, and other essential services, especially in rural and underserved areas where public transportation may be limited or unavailable. It also plays a critical role in supporting local economies by enabling individuals to participate in the workforce and engage in their communities.

It's important for me to have a driver's license because I can be out on the roads without a worry, and without having to ask my parents to drive me around. That way I can help support my family with errands. The driver's license knowledge test can be challenging because it is on a computer, which is challenging for people who don't know how to use a computer. Also, the staff working at the DMV are at times not the most supportive when people have issues with the exam.

Ensuring that all people in Oregon have a fair opportunity to obtain a driver's license, regardless of the language they speak, is vital to building strong, thriving communities. When people can access the licensing process, they're better equipped to pursue opportunities that support their health, well-being, and long-term success—and they are also better able to contribute to the economic and social vitality of their communities.

Thank you for the opportunity to share this testimony, and for your consideration of HB 2990.
