Listening to you speak that way about honest people, providing a simple service, that other people asked for. Really does show your disconnect and unwavering contempt for the populations that you are supposed to represent. Instead of reading the news article headline and being outraged by it, Have any of you even tried talking to any of the people that are buying or selling the tickets? And maybe gain some insight and some ideas for change that we can all agree on? Their information is public, you can just find their name and talk to them. You think you're helping, but you're actually going to be hurting far more people than you could imagine. By passing this law, thinking people are getting scammed now. Just wait until you see the workaround that people come up with next to lose more than necessary, just to avoid you from further interfering in their lives. The only thing about this bill that I agree with is the last part, Which lets people choose to be private with their winnings.
