

Submitter: cindy mahoney

On Behalf Of:

Committee: Senate Committee On Education

Measure, Appointment or Topic: HB3028

My concern is: What do you consider a qualified school? What do you consider a qualification for credit for online classes?

I might add a few examples:

I once took anatomy from a Berkely, Ca online class (which did not include lab unless at the university). Under the new law, would a permit be required?

The same with biochemistry taught from India.

I learned more from these classes than I did in grad school in Oregon (OHSU to be specific).

I also took a legal aid class - would this also require a permit? It was online, though I had an internship in state.

What about Theological studies? Christian studies? Would that even qualify?