something we will be dealing with soon as I watch the feller buncher and other machinery get hauled back and forth from one clear cut to the next without being fumigated for gorse and Scotch broom or any other invasive species. From one area of Oregon to another. this is going to contribute significantly to more unwanted vegetation in our "natural " forests. leading to more unwanted wildfire fuel, costing the taxpayers more, without any assistance from the primary cause, the timber industry. it is holy unfair for one industry to benefit so grossly, reaping all the benefits, providing a fraction of the jobs, while leaving the Lion's share of the burden, to the taxpayers.
