I am disconcerted about this board. Where does their limit of authority begin and end? Could they mandate caregivers not to cook, clean, or do domestic labor for clients? Many caregivers, particularly immigrant and refugee employees across the state, are threatening to quit if their data(pay stubs) is given to an unelected board. They wonder why any Democrats would support their data being shared when everyone is up in arms about Doge getting data. It also must be clear that there will be no unfunded mandates, including the administrative cost of complying with the board and associated costs. Those administrative costs will be an enormous burden on small businesses.
