

Submitter:

Harvey Bloyd

On Behalf Of:

Committee:

Senate Committee On Education

Measure, Appointment or Topic:

HB2251

Personally I don't think that banning cellphones will have any major positive change, in this day in age cellphones are inexcusable, they are used for a wide variety of things including but not limited too: social contact, inspiration, interactive entertainment, medical needs, and emergency contacts. We use our phones every day now and without them we may be able to function successfully but when you've gotten used to using a tool you start to find difficulty without it, I personally use my device for medical reasons, as well as a direct form of communication with people who may need to get ahold of me throughout the day. I also use the calculator app frequently and my notes app for taking down notes in classes at times I find it easier and quicker then writing or typing on a computer.

Were just going to continue evolving and becoming more technologically advanced i feel trying to stop this or restrict it may cause issues