My major in college was Wildlife Management and Forestry.

Beavers like all wild game needs to be managed and should be managed by the state. There are regulated seasons and limits.

Beavers are found throughout the country, and they are not endangered. What will happen is they will overpopulate and be trapped by nuisance trappers that are going to cost the taxpayer money to support, which is totally unnecessary because they could be regulated under trapping seasons like they have been for many, many seasons in Oregon.
