As humans on this earth, climate change affects all of us. No amount of money or denial can change the fact that our actions and choices have had grave impacts on the environment at every level. We must change our habits and behaviors in the hopes of slowing down their negative effects. Our young generation is living through these changes. Ideally, the education they receive would support them in finding their strength and hope to not only face the truths of our current situation but to find hope and strategies for moving beyond the current realities and toward a more sustainable future.
