Spinal and extra-spinal adjustments from physical therapists are not the same as chiropractic manipulative therapy, nor will they ever be. Chiropractic has been taught for over 125 years from institutions around the nation and now the world.

Chiropractors are the experts at spinal and extra-spinal manipulative therapy.

Allowing physical therapists this application of therapy without proper education and expertise in this will cause great harm to the public at large. The application of this therapy is meant to be precise with great care and understanding of spinal and gross anatomy, neuroanatomy, neurophysiology, and many other important aspects of the neuromusculoskeletal system.
