- 1) The facility's "experiments" do not provide any useful information that apply to humans.
- 2) Those experiments that yield no purposes are extremely painful and frightening for the primates.
- 3) Where the primates live is deplorable
- 4) They are using public funds to pay for this facility and primates care (which is extremely dubious) and that money can be donated better served funding things that support Oregonians, yield positive results, rather supporting needless pain and suffering for the primates.
