Yes, I am strongly against using all live animals for experimentation of any kind, even to try to find medicine to cure disease. It is extremely cruel, painful, and inhumane on every level. Yes, permission from living relatives, and even governments, can be obtained when people die in order to have corpses for any entity to use for experimentation. Even animal groups can try obtain permission for animals in their care to be used for experimentation when they die. Yes, the latter may be buried in common graves as are people without relatives who are buried in common graves when they're wards of the state. There has never been a good reason to use animals for experimentation of any kind over the decades and it is time to put a stop to it once and for all.
