isn't it pretty silly to see how humans are. pretending to be too serious in a society that's so inconsiderate. aimlessly simulating, extorting, entertaining & stuffing ourselves outside life to such a long extent awhile thinking we're more important than others. selfishly being; humanus could murder but for what, really. cannibalism is not thoroughly mindful when the bliss of starvation is peace. although animals eat, sleep, & some kill. their concept of boredom is just being. they don't hunt for sport. some might state that they endured genetically altered mythological torture, regularly shaking after trauma.

humans store it & refine it as a personality. homo-sapiens concept of boredom recreates indifferent behavior, similar repetitive patterns to keep everything from actuality, then individuality steadily falls back to an alienated realization. would humanity benefit from one truth & their many paths? thou everlasting drama of it all. would they do anything vastly to influence themselves to better lifestyles & so forth. compassion for all beings, & even self-love. love emphasizes unconditional giving, selfless deeds, & pursuits to oneness. I couldn't really understand anything really even if I saw it all happen. stories details are too prolonged to the capacity of interpretation within spans attention. reconcile is manipulated by law not by design. Ontologies are tools for the diagnostics linguistics.....
