SB233

As a victim of deliberate medical malpractice, I support expansion Oregon's right of action for such claims. If anything, this bill does not go far enough and is limited to one very specific injury.

In other states, the statute of limitations starts ticking when the plaintiff first discovers the injury. We are only just beginning to discover the long-term cardiovascular impacts of so-called "covid" "vaccines" which were heavily pushed by the evil OHA and the cronies aligned with the predatory and fraudulent "healthcare" providers who have formed a coalition in opposition to this bill. Hernia meshes are the tip of the iceberg when it comes to harmful medical practices.

Studies show doctors are the most blind to iatrogenic harm. They are also the most authority minded of all professionals. Given the deference to authority and government-funded propaganda that any questioning of that authority is "harmful misinformation" even when it is not, many individuals come to the realization they were harmed by a medical intervention very late. This is especially true of psychiatric drugs.

Holding "healthcare professionals" to account for the interventions they peddle through liability and right of action in the courts is good public policy. It will help reign in a corrupt and toxic profession that has gone off the rails.
