

Please make April permanently Oregon's Native Plant Appreciation Month. This would raise awareness of the importance of native plants. We are losing native plants every day. Native plants are important for ecological, cultural and economic reasons. Native plants are essential for many species of insects, birds and other wildlife, they require less water, and are more fire resilient than many non-native species.