

We do not need to grease the skids any further to move people toward a hasty, but final decision to allow someone else to assist in killing them. We have developed wonderfully effective and compassionate hospice workers who know how to alleviate discomfort for those who are dying. We should continue to foster that approach that actually reveals to the dying that they are valued.