SB238

The individual right to privacy has been seriously eroded by recent technologies. The use of unmanned aircraft (drones) by police, while understandably useful in specific situations, poses a serious threat to privacy. Drone use by law enforcement, and control of data obtained by such use, needs to be carefully and thoroughly regulated to protect privacy. Drone use could constitute an unwarranted search; therefore, such use should be restricted to situations in which a court ordered warrant is issued.

Thank you.
