Portland is becoming a great city to get around as much as possible without a car. Our quality of life is much improved when we don't have to use a car to run our errands, get to work and play destinations. I've been doing just that for the last 20+ years. Several of my friends and family have been able to do the same because we all live in the most urban neighborhoods of Portland. We feel very fortunate but wish that such could be available to all no matter where they live - community beyond strictly the car culture dominion.
