Thank you for taking my comment! I moved out here from South Florida, and there was a time when Rick Scott, as Governor, wanted to compete with California as a lower-cost alternative for a filming location. It was such a success, they even remade the "Hollywood" sign at the Coral Springs landfill for one movie.

Because this was such a resounding success, Republicans pulled back and decided to shun "liberal elites in Hollywood". Well, their loss. Oregon has SUCH a diverse environment, amazing people, and we're close to California so it's an easy trip for studios.

Do not be like Florida. Be like Oregon, and please support these incentives to bring film and television production to our great state!
