Growing up in a place without any public transit or at least not great public transit, I was actually afraid of it. I didn't know anything about it except for what I saw in the movies and it wasn't until college that I was able to explore the freedom it can provide. It was frankly game changing and I wish I was properly educated about the options earlier. Many people either don't know about or are afraid to take the bus but I think that Bend would be the perfect place to address that issue. The people here are so open and caring about the environment so if you give them the opportunity they'll take it to the moon. (make sure you add the moon on the routes). Thank you for your consideration of our stories!
