I am a bicycle commuter. i ride my bike everywhere. Road improvements often include marginal improvements for bicyclists - for example bike lanes and markings. I appreciate any improvements for bicycle use and safety which you may provide. One concern I have is with my observation of increasing risk of being hit by cars. Within the last week, for the first time during the same trip did I observe two separate incidences of cars running cross street stop signs (not even slowing down) right in front of me. Observing cars run stop signs at cross streets right in front of me used to be an extremely rare event. It has become more frequent in the last few years, but having it happen twice within 15 minutes is ridiculous - not to mention a threat to personal safety. Oh, I appreciate all the other improvements you are planning - I am just wallowing in my own near death experiences. Don't mind me, keep up your good work.
