HB3390

I oppose HB3390A. I don't want more power going to the government outside the involvement of the people. Our current Secretary of State's office is already supporting individuals to craft the titles and descriptions of their petitions. We do not need added governance, committees, groups, etc. doing what offices are already doing. That's redundant. Also, the point of the petition is to involve the public. The Secretary of State's Office provides the individual legal counsel to submit the petition, they don't write it for them. How would we know if the intent of the individual is maintained if someone from the state is crafting the title and description?
