What we've heard from School Leaders

- Overall positive responses
- Many started the school year with a policy
- Reduced incidents of bullying and harassment
- More conversations at lunch time
- Libraries are more active and book check out has increased

I personally think that this is one of the best things that the state of Oregon could have possibly done for the mental health and welfare of our kids in their learning environment.

The thing I have appreciated most about this change is that it's hopeful... I don't know what the impact will be long term... but I think everything in terms of our relationships with each other will be better.

What we've heard from High School Students

We would always talk to each other before the restriction, but it was always in our little bubbles... but now there is more talking outside our bubbles, and better learning. I feel more engaged, it's like there is way more paying attention.

The number one thing [students] are all concerned about is that we feel like our safety is not being regarded. We want to be able to contact our parents if something goes wrong at school. It is 2025 and in this country, we want to feel safe at school. It impacts our well being and our concern for safety.

I actually like not having my headphones on all the time, I feel less stressed for some reason. I feel like I have less anxiety feeling like I have to answer texts and messages all the time... My school is pretty small, and so everyone knows about my medical exemption [to have their phone out for glucose monitoring] so it's not a problem, I don't feel nervous about checking it.
